

Dear FCC,

I am deeply troubled by the news that you are considering implementing a telephone privacy proposal that would alter the current law in the State of Indiana. It appears your law would lessen the current effectiveness of our Law already in place and functioning beautifully here in Indiana. Prior to our law being implemented, I would receive at least ten calls a week from various people I had no desire to talk to. Since our law, I only get about one or two calls a month. This has made my and my family's life much more enjoyable at home. The current law in Indiana is very effective! I am afraid the National Law will not as stringent and as effective as our current state law. In our case, it is simply not necessary for you to get involved in a problem that has already been solved to Indiana's citizens satisfaction. I will be extremely disappointed if you do.

Sincerely,

Rick White,
